About me

Currentliy i'm a Frontend developer but my background in the financial sector, particularly in dealing with problematic assets and litigation, can be valuable in the IT industry, especially as IT technology is increasingly being applied in finance and asset management. This experience may provide insights into regulatory compliance, risk management, and the legal aspects of applications, which are essential considerations in many projects. My knowledge of JavaScript is also advantageous, as it's a commonly used language in development. Additionally, my background in medicine, while not directly related to IT, demonstrates my ability to learn complex subjects and problem-solve, which are valuable skills in any field.
